To: Museum boards of directors

Subject: The attendance of museums and galleries

A significant amount of data was collected to rate five museums and galleries from the most attended to the less visited one. The aim of this report is to analyse describe gathered information, and to make

General information

The attendance of five places was analysed. The most visited is the British Museum while the less visited one is Science Museum. It can be implied that the attendance of British Museum and National Gallery has ~~increased~~ shows a substantial increase of more than 1.5 mln visitors in period from 2013 to 2017. According to the chart given there is a slight decrease of attendance in museums where the admission charges were introduced in 2014, while the table ~~gives~~ three out of five places are visited by more and more people.

Comparisons

The increase of attendance of British Museum and National Gallery is the sharpest, - 500 thousand people, while the increase in Tate Gallery is only 300 thousand people. Natural History Museum and Science Museum, however, show almost the same decrease of attendance.

Recommendations

As the decrease ~~of~~ of attendance is seen only in the museums where the admission charge was introduced, it can be suggested to create days 'free of charge' to attract people. Museums ~~also~~ also should be made to appeal to children. Museums should teach children to treat nature and science respectively and be amusing in the same time, so it can be recommended to have a desk, so that children can draw on it.

Conclusion

In general, the attendance of galleries has increased while in two out of three museums the quantity of visitors has obviously decreased, so it can be ~~implied~~ <sup>concluded</sup> that new days people are more interested in art than in science.
