To: Graham Greene, member of the board of directors of the Science Museum, England
From: Billy Jenkins, (Russia) student, School №43 in Sevastopol, Russia.
Subject: (Star) Analysis of data and recommendations on how to increase popularity among visitors.

Introduction

The aim of this report is to describe the data given and to suggest ways of increasing the attendance of the (mg) major museums and galleries in England.

Main features

Despite inconsistencies within the number of visits to (numerous) (numerous) numerous museums, a trend can be spotted in the amounts of visitors from 2015 to 2017 - they all seem to rise at a steady rate. Taking a look at the period of time from 2013 to 2015, however, results in noticing a substantial decline in the overall attendance of the Natural History Museum and the Science Museum. This trend is most likely connected to the introduction of admission charges in these museums as of 2014.

Comparisons

By comparing the British Museum to the Natural History Museum, it can be concluded that admission charges have been the critical factor in the decline of the public appeal of the Natural History Museum. The National Gallery and the Tate Gallery are rather different in the amount of visitors received, with the Tate Gallery losing in this regard. This is clearly seen in the number of visitors these galleries received in 2017 - 4,8 mln people in the National Gallery and 2,2 mln people in the Tate gallery respectively.

Recommendations

Museums with admission charges expected to lessen the severity of charges or remove them completely. It would be beneficial for museums to produce pamphlets that appeal to the public as well. As for the general annual ~~additions~~ additions to the content of art exhibitions should be

Conclusion

As a general conclusion of the data analysis, I believe that a few simple changes to the work
