Attendance of national museums and galleries in England

Museums and galleries are important parts of our life. But there is a tendency to staying home instead of visiting cultural places and events nowadays. I drew on a picture of attendance of national museums and galleries in England, sorted by number of millions of visitors, for three separate years. I used the information from the "Social Statistics". Summarizing the data I can state that whole number of visitors has increased from 2013 to 2017. However, there are museums, which attendance has decreased.

First of all, admission charges made the difference. Natural History Museum and Science Museum, which introduced them in 2014, lost more than half of their visitors in 2015, comparing with ~~the~~ 2013. Their attendance has increased in 2017, though. British Museum, National Gallery and Tate Gallery had much better attendance in 2017, comparing with 2013. British Museum had the best improvement: from 2,6 millions in 2013 to 5,6 millions in 2017 - more than half of previous attendance!

It appeals to me that Natural History Museum and Science Museum shouldn't take admission charges if they want to improve their attendance. I also think that museum boards of directors should introduce cheap tickets for some group of people or weekly offers.

Respectively saying, not all cultural organisations think about their visitors nowadays. Museums and galleries should make many substantial changes to improve their attendance. Then ~~number~~ that way number of visitors will increase.
